

Benefits4Temps

Benefits4Temps specializes in a variety of insurance related benefits for part-time and temporary employees

The Federal Government defines part-time employees as people who commonly work for their employer fewer than 30 or 35 hours per week. Because of this, they are usually not eligible for employee benefits.

Temporary work or temporary employment refers to a situation where the employee is expected to leave the employer within a certain period of time. Temporary employees are sometimes called "contractual", "seasonal", "interim", "casual staff", "freelance"; or the word may be shortened to "temps". Temporary workers may work full-time or part-time, depending on the individual case. In some instances, temporary workers receive benefits (such as health insurance), but usually benefits are only given to permanent employees.
